Dear Mr. Dulles:

A line to say how very much pleased I am to learn this morning that we are to have the privilege of launching Gisevius in this country. Paul Brooks tells me that we are retaining the German copy which we have and that you are sending another to Dorothy Thompson, who is very anxious to finish reading it herself and then to write a column about it.

On the telephone you spoke of sending another manuscript to me and I simply want to say that I am on the look-out for it.

It has been a great pleasure connecting with you again with this very happy result.

Sincerely,

DW:cb
